Forces of nature

One day, Lily encountered a donation box, and she just looked at it and shook her head before leaving. She was selfish. Lily did not realize that helping people was meaningful.

The next day, Lily watched a documentary on TV. In the documentary, it recorded that an earthquake occurred in a place in Japan. The household bookshelf trembled, the chandelier was swaying and one person panicked. Lily felt bored and turned off the TV.

After Lily went to bed, she dreamed that her house was collapsed and could only live in a tent and used a cushion as a quilt to cover her body. It was very cold. She felt very frightened. Then, she awoke.

Finally, she said, 'If I donate money to the charity, I can help the victims of the earthquake.' She returned to the donation box immediately and donated two hundred dollars. The donation was for daily necessities and clothing of the victims of the earthquake. Lily became selfless and willing to help others.
