I am now seven years old. I have achieved many things that I could not do before. I couldn't tie my shoelaces by myself and tidy my room. My mum had to help me all the time.

My sister, Sally was very disappointed. She said to me, 'Tom, don't ask Mum to tie your shoelaces. You must learn to tie your shoelaces.' I was ashamed and decided to make a change!

The next day, I learned to tie my shoelaces and tidy my room. My sister was surprised because I could not do these a few months ago. She was proud of me. She said I was a clever boy.

I think I have grown up, I want to help my parents to share some housework. I can help them clean the table by myself. I can help them fold the clothes. I can also help them take the mail.

I feel like I'm not who I used to be anymore. I have grown up. You can do a lot of things. My parents think I am a good boy too.
